

A: Think about the architecture. While I'd love to assume that the difference between the implementations of the Arma2 and Arma3 servers is solely the matter of differences in source, some changes in the engine probably have been undertaken. My guess is that there are different DLLs and different level of trusts between the DLLs of the Arma2 version of the game and the Arma3 version of the game. As the DLLs are so different, an update of one doesn't recognize all the functions of another. Finally, you should not trust people who advise not to do anything they say. The Arma2 developers in the past were the ones who told everyone to not upgrade their game. I believe the developers of the Arma3 are doing the same. You can use a collection of server cheat code from the Arma2 forums to handle the cases where the Arma2 client would not recognize the Arma3 specific function or object, like this: `using GameApi; public void Arma2Function() { //Arma2 Command Function if(!GameAPI.Inventory.GetInventoryCount(GameAPI.InventoryType.All)) { CheckCommandForHelp(); //Call Arma2 Client Procedure } }` Using cheat codes, you should be able to make your Arma3 server function like the Arma2 server. I don't know how to do that with ARMA3 server with the Arma2 client. Q: Multiline lists in Python I am trying to create an html template that holds lists such as: `skills = ['Python', 'C#', 'Lisp']` The user will create or edit these lists. I just can't seem to find a simple way to make the list double-line. I've tried putting the nested lists on a new line, but that does not work. I would like to do: `skill1=['Python','C#','Lisp']` but instead I get: `skill1=['Python ','C# ','Lisp']` Which will not display nicely in the browser. What is the best way to accomplish this? A: Do you want to print the list in
