Dinamic Nucleus Pro is a multi-timbral additive synthesizer with a crisp oscillator, powerful filters, 4 envelopes and 10 effects. It is heavily weighted towards the analog domain and has an intuitive layout, making it ideal for pro-level production work. The original Nucleus Pro was released in 2009 as a faithful reconstruction of the classic E-mu Nucleus-2 classic analog synthesizer. The new Nucleus Pro is the same synth with a series of new features and enhancements. The first is the new custom oscillator and filters engine, specially designed for the new Nucleus Pro. Inspired by recent developments in additive synthesis, the oscillators generate digital waveforms based on the waveform of the original Nucleus-2. This makes the Nucleus Pro a perfect reproduction of the original sound, with an individual identity of its own. The filters of the new Nucleus Pro offer improved low-pass, high-pass and band-pass filtering, plus new modulation options. All 10 filter sections offer high-pass, low-pass and band-pass options with independent cutoff frequency adjustment, and each filter section offers 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th order band-pass options. The new Nucleus Pro includes 2 independent envelopes: an ADSR envelope and a step sequencer envelope. The ADSR envelope can be freely controlled by the parameters of the synthesizer, while the step sequencer envelope can be used to generate step sequenced sounds. A Virginia man who allegedly tried to hire a hit man to kill his pregnant girlfriend has been arrested, according to court records. Thomas Cagle, 45, was allegedly ready to pay the killer $20,000 and sent him a message on his cellphone the day before the baby was due, according to the records. He was arrested Wednesday, less than a week after the baby was born. The Washington Post reports that Cagle allegedly discussed the murder plot on July 19 with a man he had been corresponding with online. According to the Post, the victim's pregnancy was "a major sticking point" in the conversations. The pregnant mother and her boyfriend were allegedly arguing over the prospect of his having an affair with someone else when the 36-year-old woman went into labor in February. "She's not going to leave me," the victim wrote to Cagle in an online conversation about a week before the baby was born. "I've told her, 'Do what you have to do. I love you.' We have a child together." The man who Cagle allegedly paid to kill the pregnant woman has not been named. On July 19, the victim wrote to Cagle: "You're ready to do this for me, then. How much?" After allegedly confirming his willingness to pay the man, the victim wrote: "I can't believe you're ready to go this far. It's a long way to go to pay someone to murder you. You're going to get killed." Cagle told the Post that he did not intend to kill the woman, but was "looking for a way out of the relationship." He said he sent the messages to a friend who is a retired police officer, but that "he didn't think about what he said. I thought about what I was saying." Cagle also allegedly called the police to report that his girlfriend and her boyfriend were "waging war against him" and was forced to move his girlfriend and her boyfriend out of their apartment. Cagle was arraigned Thursday and released on his own recogniz
