===== HOLY HISTORY CHECK! This game is a classic riff on the Boneraiser genre. The cyberpunk-flavored setting, evil Sigils and over-arching narrative were inspired by the 1990s games Diablo 2 and Eternal Lands. The concept was based on the older Diablo 2 and Diablo 2 Arcade games, but I wanted to make it a real-time game and have 'penalties' to your vitality. I feel this gave me something that was different from others, and made it much more satisfying. About The Developer: ===== PAL BLOOD was created by PALBLOOD Studios, a small development team based out of Helsinki, Finland. We're not a huge team, but we know what we're doing. The Boneraiser genre came about with the release of Diablo 2 in 2000. People quickly found out they could combine the RPG genre with a 'battering ram' death match, and the genre quickly grew in popularity. We've played a lot of Boneraiser games and we think ours is one of the better ones. I'm the one who made the drawing of your title screen, as well as the minion animation and designs. The sound effects are from Visual Arts is done by my super-talented girlfriend Vaiti. I wrote the story and some of the lore, and I play the video game and sing the song that opens and closes every game.  Forgotten Terrains: Gujradir In the depths of the Forgotten Realms lies a demi-plane called the Gujradir. What's new in Boneraiser Minions:

, Clerks, and Senate Candidates Who Know the Script The 2016 campaign so far has been a vote of faith in America's free and open political system. It is a swath of influence, home to thousands of precinct committeemen and numerous precinct captains wielding the power to decide the future of America. It has legions of faithful volunteers prepared to work full-time for the campaign of their choice, followed by a handful of professionals who ensure that the candidate will know the script. The Professionals New Day for America, the official Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, has spent millions of dollars preparing for the 2016 election. From the start of last year, Jen Psaki, executive director of the committee, has traveled all over the country to make sure Republican operatives know who she is. During her trip to Oklahoma in February, she is said to have worked with candidates to iron out the best pitch to make to voters. She is a veteran, having served as the White House spokeswoman from 2009 to 2011. She is clean-cut, articulate, and, according to several sources, intensely loyal to the Democratic Party. In Oklahoma, she's said to have worked with would-be senator candidates Anthony, Patrick, and Jason Williams and former Oklahoma State Rep. Paul Body as well as Beto O'Rourke. Since early April, Psaki has poured her attention onto Florida, working for Republicans Alan Grayson and Gwen Graham. Behind the Scenes At New Day, the campaign's grassroots arm, the work has only just begun. On Tuesday, the committee distributed more than 1 million pieces of literature about Democratic candidates' tax plans and who is to blame for the the eruption of the financial meltdown. The output of their work has been carefully orchestrated and prepared by the Clinton campaign, with a help from the national party itself. In early April, around the time that Hillary Clinton officially endorsed 10 candidates, the committee deployed some 350 local organizers around the country ready to line up their voters and distribute their literature — and enthusiasm — to fellow campaign workers. Appropriately, when the state's Democratic convention began in mid-April, the campaigns held another in-person rally for some 200 grassroots activists from around the state. From the start of last year, the official Senate campaign of Hillary Clinton, as well as the national Democratic Party, have demonstrated their confidence in the free and
