CHARLES, MO — An explosion rocked a pre-existing building on Friday evening, according to St. Louis police. The cause of the blast was under investigation, but police and fire departments all had the same message about its severity. "We had an explosion and then a large fire. We are aware of two fatalities." Police officer-intraining Michael R. Dokita tweeted at 5:37 p.m. on Friday from the scene. The fire started just after 5:30 p.m. The blast came at about 5:34 p.m. The entire building was heavily damaged, but fire departments were able to contain the fire around 6:15 p.m. This is the latest in a series of suspicious fires in the area. Earlier this year, a gas leak in a St. Louis home killed a husband and wife. In August, a St. Louis carpenter died after a propane tank ruptured inside his car.using Server.Logging; namespace Server.Gumps { public class

A crosssectional study of 2,261 randomly selected Ghanaians in the Ashanti Region was conducted in October 2000 to determine the prevalence of hypertension and to identify risk factors for its development. Participants completed a questionnaire that contained information about sociodemographic factors, medical history, and other aspects of daily life. Systolic and diastolic blood pressures were measured by trained nurses. The overall prevalence of hypertension was 21.1% (95% confidence interval, 19.0-23.2%). The majority of the participants were middle-aged women (36 years of age, 95% confidence interval, 34.2-37.4), who lived in rural areas (78.8%) and who were of a low income (89.1% of income of US $6 per day or less). The prevalence of hypertension was positively associated with age, BMI, lack of physical activity, and cigarette smoking. The hypertension prevalence in Ghana in 2000
