A series of tricyclic derivatives of ginsenosides with antioxidant activities were designed and synthesized as vascular endothelial growth factor receptor tyrosine kinase inhibitors. Their structures were confirmed by spectral data and single-crystal X-ray diffraction. The synthesized compounds were evaluated in vitro for their VEGF receptor 2 (VEGFR2) tyrosine kinase inhibitory activities. Compounds 3 and 8 inhibited VEGF receptor 2 tyrosine kinase activities in a concentration-dependent manner. Compound 3, which possessed a 3,5-dihydroxy-4H-pyran ring, possessed the strongest inhibitory activity.[The scope of medicinal chemistry research]. Medicinal chemistry researches performed by investigators of various scientific disciplines have made significant contributions to the development of medicinal agents for improving human health. Medicinal chemistry research is an emerging field that utilizes natural products, synthetic compounds, and recombinant proteins to discover and develop new pharmacologically active compounds. Medicinal chemists work in research groups, which focus on developing therapeutically interesting targets and discovering drug candidates for disease diagnosis or treatment. The strategy used to find and develop drugs was developed by Lawrence E. Johnson, and known as the "hits and leads" approach. In this review, the scope of medicinal chemistry research is summarized by major areas, including inflammation, immunology, oncology, neurology, endocrinology, bone metabolism, cardiology, nephrology, infections, and skin biology.Pages Sunday, August 21, 2017

So, I started watching one last night, when I noticed some small talk on the Friends Twitter/Facebook page about people requesting

Friends-style groups on social media. The Friends page writer did make a Friends group on Facebook, but it's pretty sparse, so I thought I'd put one together. There's a total of ten Friends groups, from "The Cast Of Friends" (which I'm in) to "Friends Of Friends" (yes, they exist!). So, click over and give them a follow!
