VGA61760016385Driver in jainsoft.comQ: How to pass in default values for a javascript function? I have a javascript function (workbook.js) that takes an array and some user defined variables for example: var workbook = {}; workbook.outOfRange = function (dataArr, dataArrType, dataArrColor, dataArrGradient, userDefined) { if (dataArr == null || dataArr == "null") { dataArr = dataArrType; } //how to set dataArrColor and dataArrGradient if they arent already set } I would like to call workbook.outOfRange({dataArr: dataArrArr, dataArrType: [dataArrTypeArr], dataArrColor: [dataArrColorArr]}, [userDefined], [userDefined]); I was hoping to set an array to be null, or leave them off, and then set the dataArrColor and dataArrGradient variable to be the default value. A: If you want to pass in three or less arguments, you can just do a varargs: function func(...args) {...} The... is a comma-separated list of arguments, which is just a nice shorthand. You can turn it into a named parameter by passing in an array for the last parameter, although the syntax is a bit unwieldy: function func(...args) {...} func
