So as you are aware, there are lots of different ways to add a different widget on my home screen. I want to place a clock on my homescreen, but when I search in the Apps folder, I cannot find anything called clock. Is there a widget that I can use to make the same kind of clock? A: There is such a widget, but it isn't a clock. It's called a "weather widget". Just like the mobile versions of the

Apple and Android versions of the Weather Channel and Weather Underground have a weather/climate widget on the desktop versions, the Google version (very similar to the Microsoft one) has a widget that can display the current weather condition and current forecasts for cities for many, many places around the world. See all House of Commons Speaker Nicola Sturgeon (above) said she had spoken to Scottish Secretary David Davis on Friday morning in the wake of the Prime Minister's tax and spending plans, first announced in a white paper this week. Ms Sturgeon said: "Given the fiscal straitjacket we are in, and given the need to protect the most vulnerable in our society, he was kind enough to say that the SNP's tax proposals were going to be "fairer for Scotland and better for Scotland". "I think he must have received a text from one of his MSPs this morning, saying what a good chap he is for supporting us." Mr Davis said he had discussed with Ms Sturgeon his priorities for Monday's House of Commons session - including the call for MPs to vote down the Government's plans for a boundary change - and his plan to "continue to say to the Prime Minister that there are alternatives to her plan". The Boundary Commission is due to publish a report on the proposed new constituencies at 7pm on Monday. Ms Sturgeon said: "In the hours before that report, I'd like to say to Mr Davis that it's just not right that the Prime Minister should feel herself to be able to vote down the Boundary Commission and then, despite that, get away with imposing upon Scotland and on Scotland's parliament an even tougher form of austerity and a much longer period in which to pay for it. "We think that is a pretty fundamental injustice." She added: "I think people in Scotland want to see a change and a better plan. "And, in the meantime, let us focus on the things we c6a93da74d
