The present invention relates to a die cutting machine, and more particularly, to a die cutting machine with a cutting blade moved by an eccentric driving means to cut and separate parts from the continuous medium and transfer the cut parts to other processing machines, where the cutting blade is circular. A die cutting machine is a processing machine that is used for cutting sheet materials and transferring them to other processing machines. Such a die cutting machine comprises a die plate and a cutting blade reciprocally moved on the die plate to cut the material into parts. In general, the die cutting machine comprises a circular die plate and a cutting blade circular in shape having a center axis, and an eccentric driving means to reciprocally drive the die cutting machine on the die plate. The eccentric driving means includes an eccentric shaft having an eccentric wheel and an eccentric sleeve, a crank gear rotated by a motor, and a guide shaft to guide the crank gear. However, when the die cutting machine is operated continuously, the eccentric shaft is rotated in a circular pattern. This causes the eccentric wheel to generate a continuous, circular, circular, circular, circular movement in a continuous process, and the eccentric sleeve to reciprocate along the eccentric wheel. Consequently, there may be portions in a continuous processing zone that the cutting blade does not contact and thus cannot cut the material.
